Pledges Palestinians won't lose pullbacks if talks fail

By DAVID MAKOVSKY and MICHAL YUDELMAN

In a new diplomatic initiative, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is orging the Palestinians to accept an accelerated timetable for negotiating the final disposition of the territories. officials in Jerusalem said yesterday. The talks would bopefully be completed within six months, and no later than nine months

Netanyahu said he would be willing to culminate the talks with US participation at a Camp Davidstyle summit, thus welcoming the personal involvement of President Bill Clinton.

Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat last night rejected the proposal as coming too late. His spokesman, Nabil Abu Rudeinch, said Arafat had received no official proposal, but if he had, it would not have been accepted. "Nobody can guarantee these matters can be implemented. We don't have enough trust that matters can be completed," Abu Rudeineb said after speaking with Arafat. "We have a signed agreement and American and European letters of assurance. We don't have

Under the Oslo Accords, final stams talks are supposed to con-elude in May 1999. They were supposed to resume this week, but have oot due to Palestinian anger over Har Homa.

To preempt likely Palestinian suspicion that the initiative is a ruse to avoid the second and third redeployments during the interim period, Netanyahu included a stipulation that, if the two sides fail to reach agreement within the timetable, then both sides would return to the curreot interim agreement, and the second and third redeployments would occur as planned.

As it stands now, the second pullback is planned for this fall and the third by mid-1998. Earlier this month, in the first pullback, Israel agreed to yield 9.1 percent of the West Bank, but this bas yet to be implemented, because the Netanyahu sought to raise the idea personally with Arafat at a Monday night summit, but the Palestinian leader refused to attend due to his anger over Har Homa, But it seems that Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan briefed Arafat on the idea during his visit to Gaza.

Since parts of the idea were misunderstood by the Palestinians and Netanyahu has no direct access to Arafat, cabinet secretary Danny Naveh went over this again verbally with top Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat.

Israel is planning to brief Egypt about the proposal in the coming days.

There is no official written proposal, the official stressed, pointing to just two pages of a hand-writteo outline. He suggested the idea is being revealed oow, because of Palestinian misunderstandings and because parts of the idea were to be broadcast on Channel 1. He sharply denied that the timing of the initiative is designed to deflect attention away from Har Homa.

The rationale for the proposal is a belief, the official said, that "instead of the interim period building confidence between us and the Palesumans as intended, it

OC Northern Command Maj .-Gen. Amiram Levine told reporters last night that a Hizbullah squad had fired two anti-tank missiles and mortars at the convoy. He said the missiles were probably of the Faggot type, an improved and more accurate version of the Sagger, which has improved armor-penetrating power and speed.

The two missiles, he said, were fired from a distance of 1,500 to 1.600 meters, and one of them hit the command car.

Levine said the Hizbullah squad probably consisted of two or three terrorists who fired and fled. He noted that troops in the convoy returned fire with support from other units, including some artillery. It was unlikely, bowever, that the attackers were hit.

Hizbailah bas switched to osing the Faggot missile more frequently in recent attacks, including the one at the end of last month in which a Merkava tank was hit. ### Arafat to meet Mubarak over Har Homa

By MICHAL YUDELMAN and news agencies

Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat is to travel to Cairo Levy. today for talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubacak over the Har Homa crisis, Arafat aide Nabil. Abu Rdainah said yesterday. Mubarak yesterday blasted the start of construction at the Jerusalem hilltop site. "If this settlement is built, this will not be the end of the whole thing. It will be the beginning of a new cra of violence, which we would like to avoid," he said in Cairo.

Speaking to reporters after meeting with Belgian Foreign Minister Erik Derycke, Mubarak accused Israel of pursuing policies based on the "arrogance of power." He said the crisis over the 6,500-apartment project is the gravest to face the Middle East peace process since his predecessor Anwar Sadat made his historic trip to Israel in 1977.

"What is happening now is very dangerous," said Mubarak. "I feel the consequences may be terrible and may hurt all of us and lead to instability in the area."

Meanwhile, European Union envoy to the Middle East Miguel Angel Moratinos met with Arafat and his deputy Mahmoud Abbas in Gaza yesterday, in an attempt to coordinate a meeting between Abbas and Foreign Minister David ready to invade."

Arafat rejected Netanyahu's claim that he was inciting the Palestinians to violent resistance. Arafat said he had given a clear message to Palestinians to avoid violence, to remain calm, and to follow his instructions, Moratinos said.

Moratinos told the BBC last night no decision on the Middle East peace process is inteversible. "We have to persuade both Israelis and Palestinians to take care of the peace process," he said.

Levy asked Moratinos to pass onto the Palestinians the message that it is important to maintain continuity in the contacts between Israel and the Palestinians to prevent a vacuum which will suck in the radical elements.

Moratinos, who updated Levy before meeting Arafat, told him that in his opinion the Palestinians are womied by the government's decision-making process more than by the decisions themselves. They expect Israel to make them partners to the decision-making, he said.

He stressed that he did not come to the conference Arafat organized in Gaza on Saturday to show that the Europeans are interested in calming things down.

Levy said Israel does not approve of the European activity which preceded the UN condemnation of the Har Homa construction. Yesterday, Arafat met with former report.

To regain trust, the PA requires as a minimum that the building on Har Homa be "postponed."

Abu Rudeinch indicated that had the proposal come before the redeployment and Har Homa decisions were taken, the response might have been different. Israel Radio reported last night that Netanyahu said the govern-ment needs broad support for this move, but not a change in its composition MK Ehud Barak (Labor), meanwhile, came out strongly against joining a national unity govern-ment. Barak, who officially launched his campaign for the party leadership yesterday, told a press conference in Tel Aviv that be would refuse to join a unity government regardless of what position he is offered.

We will not join this rotten goverament of disgrace and failure," he said. "It simply must be toppled. That is a basic political requirement. Labor would be making a cardinal error if it joins such a goverament, now or in the future. It must serve the public in the opposition ... If it fades away into cabinet chairs, honest citizens will ask themselves who is the real opposition to this government? They will look right and left and go with whoever they see there."

Barak's statement followed reports that party chairman Shimon Peres is organizing MKs to support a unity government, on the assumption that Prime Minister Netanyahu will propose such a move if he emerges unscathed from the Bar-On affair.

Peres, who discussed the possibility with a group of Labor MKs this week, gave them the impression that Netanyahu has already made up his mind to form a unity government and that Peres would get the defense portfolio.

But Netanyahu said yesterday he has made no decision concerning a unity government.

Peres yesterday denied reports of he was offered the defense portfohis "galloping" toward a unity govlio, or that if Netanyahu survives ernment and said no such offer has

The High Court of Justice, as expected, yesterday rejected two petitions for a halt to construction on Har Homa, as earth-moving machinery continued to excavate the Jerusalem hilltop site.

The court rejected two of three petitions, saying it would deliberate further on the third. The justices did ask the government to submit within 60 days an explanation of its planning decision, after hearing arguments that city planners had only considered the needs of the city's Jewish residents.

There is nn agreement between Israel and Jordan over the cvacuation of wounded from Naharayim, Internal Security Minister Avigdnr Kahalani inld the Knesset plenum yesterday in answer to several motions to the agenda nver the murder nf seven Beit Shemesh schoolgirls last Thursday. He also said the police were not aware of the Educatinn Ministry policy not to allow schoolchildren to visit Naharayim.

The answer to the question [nf] why the Jordanians did not allow us in evacuate the wounded girls after the shooting attack is that the discussions between Jordan and Israel on evacuation arrangements have not yet been concluded and the matter has not been closed between the twn countries," Kahalani said.

Kahalani said that three months agn, Education Ministry officials had told local police nnt to allow children to visit the site and had been told to coordinate the request with National Phlice Headquarters, but the headquarters had received no such demand from the ministry. Hc said the school enuld not be blamed for taking the children to the site, because all the permits it had received were in

Education Ministry afficials and representatives of Beit Shemesh and its AMIT-Fuerst School engaged in a round of "dueling documents" yesterday at a Knesset Education Committee session on last Thursday's tragedy at Naharayim

At the end of the meeting, the committee decided that the ministry had "not done everything to make sure its guidelines were followed.

Committee chairman MK Emanuel Zissman was forced to intervene on several occasions to restore order in the stormy session, in which Deputy Education Minister Moshe Peled and Shlomo Zudkevich, in charge of security and safety for the ministry, produced documents showing that schools had been properly informed that visits to the Jordanian-controlled section of the Naharayim complex were forbidden.

Meanwhile, Beit Shemesh Deputy Mayor Eli Ben-Lulu and the director-general of the Amit Schools, Ami Ze'evi, produced documents of their own they claimed showed that the ministry encouraged such visits, and which never made elear they were forbidden.

The controversy focused nn a circular issued by Peled's office on October 22, 1996, nnting the importance of visiting the site and the old Ruttenberg electricity plant there as part of celebrations marking 100 years of Zionism and the school system's Industry Year. However, the document clearly states that the ministry was still working at that time "to finalize the necessary arrangements to permit delegations nf pnpils to visit the site, without delay." Doron Cohen of the Beit She'an police said that police at the site had not received anything in writing saying they should stop groups of pupils from visiting on the island.Ben-Lutu said: "All the arrows are being aimed at the school," instead of at the terrorist. Noting that parents with children regularly visit the site as private individuals, he asked: "Are there two different standards for children and far schoolchildren?"

At the conclusion of the meeting, the com-mittee wrote that the ministry should have had the IDF and the police prevent visits to the site, and should have "filled the gaps" regarding the guidelines if there were any. It also recom-mended that the Pressler Commission - which visited Naharayim yesterday and received a briefing from army and police representatives there - include a representative of the National Parents Association.

German woman charged in Nazi camp deaths

ERFURT, Germany (AP) - An alleged former guard at a Nazi concentration camp for women has been charged with trampling to death a young immate in 1945, court officials said yesterday. Prosecutors say the woman, now 79, beat the girl with a club when she resisted being separated from her mother at the Malchow camp, part of the Ravensbruck concentration camp complex. When the girl fell to the ground, witnesses said the accused stomped on her with boots until the intestines spilled out and she died, prosecutors said.

Hussein fires Kabariti

New Prime Minister Majali negotiated Israel peace treaty

News agencies AMMAN - King Hussein sacked his prime minister yesterday and appointed longtime friend and Mideast peace campaigner Abdel-Salam Majali to form a new cabinet. Jordan Television said Hussein accepted Abdel-Karim Kabariti's resignation during a balf-hour meeting at the royal palace. The outgoing 30-member cabinet also attended.

In his letter of appointment, Hussein told Majali that the top foreign policy priority is commitment to the Middle East peace process and support for Palestinian calls for statehood. "The first [point] is our commitment to the peace process and our concern to support it to enable it to is exposed 10," the king told Majali in the letter, published by the official Petra news agency. "And in this context I affirm the continuation of our support to our Palestinian brothers until they attain their rights and set up their state on their land," the king said. Majali's principal job was to prepare Jordan for parliamentary elections, due to be beld in November, Hussein added.

Majali, 71, is a former army general who served as prime minister between May 1993 and January 1995. He negotiated - and later signed - Jordan's 1994 peace treaty with Israel. Palace officials said they expected few changes in key portfolios - a strong indication that the cabinet shakeup will overcome all the obstacles that it not have much effect on Jordan's to peace with Israel.

Government officials said that Kabariti, 47, who also served as defense minister, was seen as mishandling the crisis that arose over the killing of seven Israeli schoolgirls by a Jordanian soldier along the border last week. The officials said Kabariti arrived late at Naharayim and then bitterly attacked Binyamin Netanyahn on the phone for blaming the shooting on a harsh letter sent by King Hussein to the Israeli premie

In a barsh letter to Kabariti, carried by Petra, Hussein blamed the outgoing premier for blatant bureaucracy and red tape and lack of reforms in the state's structure.

He specifically referred to more than 100 orphans, whom Hussein moved to one of his palaces earlier this month after he found them suffering from inadequate services and care.

Hussein said that Kabariti's response that he was more touched by the weeping of his social affairs minister than the situation of the orphans themselves had "startled" him. "May God forgive you," Hussein added in an sual criticism of an ontgoing

The cabinet shuffle came as a surprise, because officials expected that Kabariti, who is also a member of parliament, would head a transitional government in May to prepare for elections expected next November. Kabariti admitted he didn't expect the change. "Events, changes and developments whether locally or regionally always surprise us," be said after chairing his last cabinet meeting earlier in the day.

One change will involve the foreign affairs portfolio, which Kabariti held in the previous government. Fayez Tarawneh, a leading member of the team that negotiated the 1994 treaty, will handle foreign affairs in the new government.

Afghan blast kills over 40

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) - At least 40 people were killed and scores wounded yesterday in a huge explosion at an ammunition dump near the eastern Afghan city of Jalalabad, foreign aid workers reported.

At least 81 people were rushed to the Jalalabad hospital and the number of dead was likely to rise, said Red Cross officials who spoke on condition they were not further identified.

In Peshawar, Pakistan, border officials said 50 people were killed in the morning explosion in Jalalabad, about 75 kilometers from the border on the main highway from Pakistan to Kabul, the Afghan capital.

There was no official word on whether the explosion was accidental or sabotage, but there have been several previous incidents when depots were carelessly ignited. The explosion destroyed hundreds of homes near the ammunition depot which was inside a police compound, said the border officials who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

The compound was in a residential area about 10 kilometers west of the city. Access to the area is restricted because of the large number of security installations nearby.

Police said shifting winds could require the evacuation of downtown Baton Rouge. The downtown area includes the state Capitol, other state government buildings and the Governor's Mansion.

The barge overturned near the west bank and began leaking below the water line. More than a dozen families were evacuated in Port Allen, and on the east side in Baton Rouge, Southern University was evacuated as well.

Don't watch TV? Still gotta pay that fee!

By RUTHE BLUM

eware, warns the Israel Broadcasting Aothority about not paying its televi-sion fee, lest the big bad collection department confiscate your set and sell it into slavery.

Some people ignore these warn-ings, judging the risk of being fer-reted out by the IBA to be slim. Others, viewing this tax on TV sets to be unjust, refuse to pay it, also regarding the chances of getting caught and having their set takeo away as small.

S.R. and I.G. currently live in a rented house in Efrat which is oot equipped with a TV antenna on the roof. There is oo reception, so the couple can only watch videotapes. Because the house is rented, the couple does not want to install an antenna at their own expense. As S.R. and I.G. are law-ahiding and otherwise responsible citizens, they have always paid their annual TV fees on time.

This year, however, the couple, unable to view any channel whatsoever, is seeking an exemption. After looking into the law, I would like to state for the record that it is anjust and reminiscent of Bolshevism at its finest.

According to the IBA Collection Department, paragraph 29 of the Broadcasting Authority Law states that a person who purchases or otherwise receives a television set, must report this to the IBA within 30 days and begin paying the fee which is imposed on the possession of a set - oot on whether the owners watch television.

The law further states that no matter how many televisions we own, we only have to pay for one. People who live in areas where reception is poor are requested to inform the IBA, to enable it to try and locate the problem and correct it by generally improving the nationwide network. Anyone who sells or transfers his TV set to someone else must inform the IBA in writing within 30 days. Anyone going abroad for a period of over six months can be exempt from paying the TV fee during that period if he transfers the set to someone else who pays the fee. Anyone doing this must inform the IBA in writing and provide the name and other personal data of the person "babysitting" for the set. Within 30 days of returning to Israel, he must inform the IBA and resume paying his fees.

Finally, TV merchants must inform the IBA of every transaction involving the transfer of a TV set, whether it is a sale, a rental, or a loan

The following are methods of paying the fee:

1. A single, advance payment. (This year, the last date for dolog this was the end of February.)

2. In two installments, the first of which could have been paid, without a fine, hy the end of February. If paid in March, there is a 10 percent fine and if in April, the fine is 20 percent. The second installment can be paid in July.

3. Via standing order at the hank. Payment is split into four parts. It is currently possible to sign a standing order and to begin paying from the second of the four installments for 1997.

Notice of payment should come in the mail. The fee can be paid at any postal bank branch - with or without this notice. It is also possihle to pay the IBA directly with a credit card.

The IBA recommends that the public pay via standing order so it can "perform collection on time." Beware, hig brother is watching.

For goodness sake... drink as a ritual

By DANGEL ROGOV

15th-century Japanese adage warns that "there can be no greater mortification for a host than if his servants offer sake that has oot been appropriately warmed."

Considering that even a minor mortification was considered a reason for hara-kiri (ritual suicide), most hosts made a point of testing the temperature of these beversges before they were brought to table.

Five ecoturies later, the rules of etiquette are a bit less demanding. It is, however, still considered mandatory to serve sake with any Japanese dinner. And currently, as a visit to local pubs or restaurants will show, sake is also the rapidly rising star on the beverage

Sake, which is the famous rice wice of Japan, was reportedly first made in the third century. This early drink was called kuchikami no sake, which translates into "chewing-in-the-mouth sake." The name evolved because during various Shinto religious festivals, it was traditional for the members of a village to enew rice and theo spit it ioto a wooden tuh where it would ferment.

Fortunately for those with sensitive stomachs, after yeast was discovered, it was no longer necessary to rely on half-chewed rice to make Japan's most popular beverage.

Categorized more correctly as a beer than a wine, modern sake is made hy washing and polishing rice (the polishing removes most of the fatty acids that caose hangovers) hy steeping the rice in spring water and transferring it to wooden tubs into which steam is forced.

A skillful hrewer theo chooses the yeast spores most suited to each hatch, hleods the batches together and hrings the sake to its desired 15 to 20 percent alcohol content.

Sake brewers are considered practitioners of one of Japan's nohlest and most mysterious art forms

Good sake ranges from colorless to a very light lemon color with a vague greeo tint to deep amber. But whatever its color, sake should be perfectly elear.

For this purpose, sake is often tasted in special ceramic or porcelain "snake-eye" eups on the hottom of which are several concentric circles. If, as one peers into the cop those lines are distorted, it is a sign that the sake is oot as clear as it should

While those cups are ideal, wine glasses or the square wooden cops known as masu can also be used for drinking.

Although sake served in cups or glasses can be served warm, chilled or at room temperature, that offered in masu should always be served at room temperature.

Uoder oo circumstances should sake be served hot, for overheating destroys its natural flavors. One sips from a corner of the wooden serving vessel and that corner can be sprinkled with a bit of

Equally important in the evaluation of sake is aroma, and so complex is the language that has evolved about the flavors of sake that at least 90 different words are used to describe them.

FOR SAKE DRINKERS, tasting can be a marvelons exercise in ritual.

First, the sake is slurped to allow air in, and the beverage is theo pushed around the mooth, allowing the toogue, the palate and the roof of the mouth full exposure.

The most experienced tasters then suck io a little air and then slowly hreathe the air out through their oostrils, an act that gives intense impressions of scent and taste.

Sakes can be sweet, semi-dry or dry and, like wine, can have medium, light or heavy body and can be elean, dirty or even "ill bred." Sake that is too heavy is said to be garrulous, eloying, heavy or thick.

On the positive side, sake whose flavors linger comfortably io the mouth and nostrils after it has been swallowed, is said to "have a tail."

Three different brands of sake are now widely available in local wine stores and puhs, and at least seveo more can be found io various Japanese restaurants.

Sake brewers are considered practitioners of

Unlike fine wines that can age for many years, most sakes are hest wheo served young. Bottles are almost always marked with the date of bottling, so huy sake that is less than a year old. Once at home, sake should be stored io a cool, dry place out of direct sunlight.

Remember that sake deteriorates rapidly after the bottle has been opened.

Those who want to determine which is their favorite sake will do well to go, ideally with a group of three or four frieods, to one of the better Japanese restaurants in the country. Order one glass or masu of each of the sakes available, sharing tasting experiences with your companions. For sobriety's sake, the tasting should he accompanied by a variety of first courses such as sushi or sashi-

At this writing, the hroadest selection can be found at either the Tel Aviv or Herzliya hranches of Takamaru. Good tastings can also be made in Tel Aviv at Kyoto or Yakimono and in Jerusalem at Sakura.

Those in pursuit of further knowledge about sake will do well to seek out Hiroshi Kondo's excellent Sake - A Drinkers' Guide which is published in English by Kodansha International in Tokyo, New York and London.

A minimum too dear

The decision taken on Monday by the Knesset Lahor and Social Affairs Committee to raise the minimum wage to NIS 2,349 per month - 47.5% of the average wage - is difficult to criticize. To state that one is opposed to the increase is to open oneself to charges of being heartless to the working poor, especially considering how difficult it is to make ends meet on some NIS 2,300 a month.

Nevertheless, after weighing the pros and cons, the conclusion which must be reached is that the decision to raise the minimum wage and automatically adjust it on a yearly hasis may in the long run increase both unemployment and inflation. The price for these negative effects will in all likelihood be paid by the weaker elements of society. While no one can impugn the intentions of MKs Tamar Gozansky, Meir Sheetrit, Anat Maor and Maxim Levy, they are operating under traditional assumptions that the way to fight poverty is by imposing high taxes, increasing government transfers to the poor and legislating wage increases. These remedies have been tried for decades in many countries, and have failed to effectively combat poverty.

Instead of focusing almost exclusively on who gets what, a number of thinkers in recent years have proposed alternative methods of fighting poverty, based on the dynamic elements within economies that produce greater wealth for all through real economic growth. The emphasis is on repairing the structure of the economy, rather than legislating changes. Adopting this point of view is preferable to maintaining the older, socialist-based ideas behind the Knesset committee's actions.

Accurately predicting the economy-wide effects of government actions is notoriously difficult, because of the enormous complexity of modern economies. Three years ago, Princeton University economists David Card and Alan Krueger caused a stir in academic economics when they reported that, according to studies they had conducted in California, Texas, and New Jersey, raising the minimum wage sometimes actually increased employment. They explained this result by suggesting that being paid more money caused employees to take their obs more seriously and conscientiously, which in turn led to greater productivity, less need for supervision, and reduced employee turnover.

While there might be a ring of plausibility to low-wage earners in the restaurant industry, especially the hamburger-flipping teenagers in the type of fast-food eateries that are increasingly dotting the Israeli skyline. If all restaurants across the board are required to pay their employees more, they are all likely to pass on the extra costs to their customers. The teenagers will presumably also ontgrow these jobs very quickly.

However, there are other industries, such as textiles, which are more likely to employ older minimum-skilled and minimum-wage workers who cannot afford to lose their jobs. If labor costs in these industries increase too sharply. employers might be tempted to take advantage of Israel's new relations with neighboring states and relocate their factories to countries with lower labor costs, such as Egypt.

In the Israeli context the effects of raising the minimum wage on inflation should not be discounted either. The minimum wage is calculated as a percentage of the average wage. But increasing the minimum wage in itself raises the average wage. In addition, the raising of the minimum wage leads other workers to demand more when they come to the collective bargaining table. Add to this the increase in prices due to extra costs being passed on to consumers, and one has a recipe for inflationary pressure. Much effort has been expended in recent years to reduce the Israeli inflation rate to "European levels." We are not there yet, and a trend toward increasing inflation would undermine efforts aimed at attracting foreign investment. Again, the greatest hardships caused hy a slumping economy will be borne hy the workers whose interests are supposed to be protected hy the new legislation. Finally, consideration should be given to the type of economy we want. There are an estimated 300,000 minimum-wage earners here - some 15% of the workers - many of them women. It is proublesome that such large numbers of people are at the bottom of the pay scale. MK Amnon Rubinstein (Meretz) has stated that he supports increasing the minimum wage precisely because it may cause the collapse of minimum wage. industries, "which have no place in Israel." But getting rid of those industries will not help those low-skilled workers who have lost their jobs. More productive proposals have been made hy the Bank of Israel, such as reducing the size of the public sector and lowering the tax hurden in order to bring about larger net wages. Structural

An end to self-respect

ing Hussein's visit to Beit Shemesh to see the families whose daughters were murdered a week ago was, without doubt, a humanitarian act. But what followed was a tasteless gesture by thoughtless hosts.

Was it necessary to usher the king, his hands still warm from shaking those of the distraught families, into a festive dinner at the King David Hotel? At the very least, it showed a lack of sensitiv-

But what came then was Israeli political leadership at its lowest level.

Binyamin Netanyahu was a ware that the king's visit was strongly condemned hy Jordan's opposition, which came out in support of the soldier who slew the Israeli youngsters and injured others.

So there was a price to pay for Hussein's bold decision to visit. And Hussein, in a bid for a more dominant role in the peace talks, suggested a stream of concessions to Yasser Arafat, just as he did over Hebron. He was backed hy President Clinton, who had sent a secret message to Netanyahu a couple of days before, outlining similar concessions.

Among them was safe passage between the West Bank and Gaza for Palestinians, and 400 new housing units in Sur Baher, an Arab neighborhood in eastern

URI DAN DENNIS EISENBERG

A concession that could lead to war? Yes - but Netanyahu was convinced that a grateful Arafat would at least ensure a successful meeting between them the following night.

Yet once again, Arafat demonstrated how simple it is to humiliate the Israeli prime minister. After canceling the meeting, he wouldn't even come to the phone.

Work began at Har Homa this week, but at the cost of dangerous concessions to the PLO

The meaning of the snub was clear. "Your proposals are inadequate. Try harder." Panic seems to have taken command in Jerusalem.

A FRANTIC call was made to Hosni Mubarak. Precisely what Netanyahu said to the Egyptian president we don't know. But we know that he pleaded with and our soldiers. It is no secret that the PLO leader's minions who are granted VIP status abuse the privilege, smuggling weapons and explosives with impunity on the West Bank and Gaza. An intelligence source told us that whenever Arafat travels, his vehicle is always loaded down with weaponry, its chassis hanging low on the road. Netanyahu's security people, as well as the IDF, constantly warn that this method of transporting weapons and explosives is common in the Palestinian Authority.

The prime minister was also warned that, with work beginning on Har Homa, Arafat has given the go-ahead to Hamas and Islamic Jihad leaders on renewing terror attacks against Israelis. It is no more than the task of intelligence chiefs to express opinions on this and other security dangers facing the country; and it is the function of governments to weigh such warnings, Then they must make a political decision - in this case, whether to press ahead with construction, or wait. When the country's vital interest is at stake, they cannot allow themselves to be swayed hy criticism at home or ahroad. The work that started at Har Homa two days ago is the first sign that Netanyahu is beginning to understand this. Hopefully, this ing project, either, it's a supremely strategic one. It fills in the "ring" of Jewish neighborhoods around the capital, cutting off Jerusalem from the Arab West Bank. The Rabin government initiated the plan, and the Netanyahu government is bringing it to fruition. So what's the problem? It'll set off a wave of terror, it'll kill the peace process? Not necessarily. There are Israeli soldiers and cops all over the place, locked and loaded. The government has made it plenty clear that there will be no "restraint," like there was: during September's riots (when about 70 Palestinians were shot to death, along with 16 Israelis). It's hy no means certain that the Palestinians are ready to go through that again, or something worse. Netanyahu sounds-like he's full of beans this time; he could send the tanks into Gaza, Ramallah, really shake their world.

Maybe he could get away with it. Diplomatically, he's not doing badly so far.

But first and foremost, Arafat would finally be allowed, for his own personal purposes, to use Dahaniya airport in Gaza. A port would also be constructed there. Netanyahu agreed to go ahead.

To ensure that Arafat met Netanyahu the following night, the PLO chief was told that, in future, he could fly to and from Gaza without undergoing inspec-tion by Israeli officials. Naturally, the PLO chief was delighted with this concession. It fulfilled a Palestinian dream, he said. And he intends to inaugurate the occasion with a fly-by performance tomor-

TOW: Israeli officials hinted that this freedom would eventually extend to all aircraft landing at Dahaniya, pending "other security arrangements at the airport yet to be finalized.

Now this is something both Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres refused adamantly to sanction. Both men - and Netanyahu - were given repeated security and intelligence warnings that if the airport and port were allowed to operate unchecked by Israel, it would be tantamount to an open invitation for the Palesunians to flood Gaza with modern weaponry. Which is precisely what Arafat wants.

Mubarak, asking him to persuade Arafat "to be reasonable."

After dining with King Hussein, a real friend, it seems incongruous that the prime minister should humble himself before Muharak, who attacks Israel and Netanyahu every chance he gets, either directly, or via his pliant press. Netanyahu was scraping the bottom of the harrel of self-respect.

He got a dusty reply from a president resentful over the way the king was muscling in on the peace process, when Mubarak saw himself as leader of the Arabs.

Sure it is. They should get behind Netanyahu, strengthen his hand by showing the world that even Israeli "doves" are for this project, instead of whimpering, Not now; there'll be trouble."

The impression is that they agree in principle with Netanyahu on Jerusalem, but, unlike the prime minister, don't have the guts to stand up for what they believe in.

The consensus-minded folks in the opposition are miserable for good reason: Har Homa is revealing the contradiction in their political creed, the contradiction between demanding Maximum Jerusalem and, at the same time, allowing Palestinians to keep their self-respect.

When Palestinians say Har Homa is their humiliation, what do the well-intentioned moderates think - that it's just a result of overweening Arab pride and touchiness? Or that it's a trick, that the Palestinians don't really give a damn about this city they call Al-Kuds, that they made it all up just to spite us??

The "centrist" criticism of Netanyahu is that he acted indelicately, "unilaterally" - that if he had just explained to Arafat that Israel needs Har Homa to cement its exclusive claim on One Big Jerusalem, the Palestinians wouldn't have taken it so hard.

Sorry, there's no way to finesse this issue. If we want to rule all of Jerusalem eternally. we have to ram it down the Palestinians' throats. We have 10 shatter their will, and the sooner the better.

Netanyahu's doing it. He's riding very tall in the saddle, and the Palestinians are stumbling around like they've been gutshot. In Netanyahu's eyes, this is the way it should be. These are the proper relations for making "peace."

Unpleasant? Not what the loyal opposition had in mind? When Shimon Peres, Ehud Barak and the other middle-of-the-roaders see the spectacle on Har Homa, they are seeing United Jerusalem in action.

Until they find the course to break the national consensus and call for a Shared Jerusalem, they should at least have the course to admit that those buildozers are only doing their dirty work.

US Congress opens Web sites to reach 'wired' voters

o the Internet, where new products come and go in the blink of an eye, time is said to move at "Internet speed." But in the rarefied air of Congress, where legislation often moves at a glacial pace, few would equate "Washington time" with the speed of cyberspace. That may be changing, however, as Congress struggles to come to grips with the Net as a phenomenon with great potential for

The Jerusalem Post Thursday, March 20, 1997

In the 1996 election, exit polls showed more than 25 percent of voters were "wired" and about 10 percent primarily used online sources of information in deciding how to vote. Responding to the surge in Net use by voters, congressional Internet use also has skyrocketed. At the beginning of 1994, just a handful of lawmakers had posted bome pages on the World Wide Web. Two years later, 222 representatives and 85 senators had Weh pages. The Congressional Internet Caucus has 91 members, up from 60 in the last Congress. Despite the flurry of activity, Congress will never be on the cutting edge, according to some who work in the capital.

"I expect Congress will always be one or many steps behind," said Chris Casey, wbo helped set up the first congressional Weh page, A question about when Congress would be "up to speed" on the Net brought peals of laughter from the audience of staffers.

Nonetheless, some legislators bave gone beyond posting simple Web pages and have integrated the Net into the most basic opera-tions. of their congressional offices. Representative Anna Eshoo, a California Democrat whose district encompasses Silicon Valley, created a special area on her Web site to give constiments individualized information. A constituent sends Eshoo a query and receives a personal answer posted on a private part of the site accessible only to that individual with a password. Senator Pat Leahy, Democrat of Vermont, participates in live online chat sessions with schoolchildren in his bome state with transcripts on his Web site.

Leahy's office also is planning to start a newsgroup, a type of group mailing list on the Net, devoted to Vermont issues. Almost all legislators accept electronic mail but most respond on paper through the mail. Leahy's office is one of the few that answer email with e-mail, staffer Paul Mann said. Although some feared this might overwhelm the office with too many messages, "surprising-ly it hasn't happened," Mann said.

For the co-chairman of the Internet Caucus, Representative Rick White, the Internet is a key foundation of his media strategy. "The first place we send any press release is to our Web page," White staffer Aaroo Weissman told the Web information session. Even media staff for the Washington state Republican Party look to the Weh site to find copies of a release to send to the media, Weissman added.

The Internet is also changing the way groups tobby Congress. The Ciozen's Internet Empowerment Coalition set up a Web page to get Internet users to send e-mail to Congress on the issue of restricting obscenity oo the Net.

But since legislators are most interested in hearing from voters in their own districts, the page looks up the e-mail address of an Internet user and guides users to send targeted messages. "We have a responsibility as advocates in educate internet users," said Jonah Seiger of the Center for Democracy and Technology, which helped set up the coalition's site.

Much more remains to be done to educate users and legislators. While the text of hills is available online, some advocates want Congress to make more information available.

There are broad sections of the electorate that are entirely uninformed about what our Congress does," Gary Ruskin, director of the Congressional Accountability Project, said. "So much of the problem is that it is very, very difficult to obtain in real time the core documents of our democracy." Ruskin urged that Congress post an assortment of documents on the Web, including voting records, disclosure forms, testimony from hearings and draft legislation.

Furthermore, if your husband feels hurt and angry at the prospect of his family going away on a pleasurable trip while he is in the reserves, deeper feelings of insecurity must be lurking. As such, it is probably not the actual trip evoking his ill will, but more likely something in his past relating to abandonment which is responsible. India will allow foreign companies to have 100 percent stakes in oil exploration projects, reversing a long-standing policy requiring state participation, India's petroleum minister said. In a statement Tuesday to Parliament, Petroleum Minister T.R. ### Korea's Sammi group files for bankruptcy

South Korea's debt-ridden Sammi Group requested court receivership yesterday to keep afloat the nation's leading specialty steel-maker. Sammi Steel Co. was declared bankrupt hours later, unable to bonor 1.1 billion won ($1.3 million) in debts at two local banks.

Foreign capital pumped into the economy by the private sector, a major barometer of excessively high interest rates, plummeted last year to $4.4 billion from $7.9b. in 1995, according to data released yesterday by the Bank of Israel. Of the overall figure for capital inflows last year, $3.6h. represented foreign-currency denominated loans taken by Israeli residents,

Hotel industry's revenues stagnant last year

By HAIM SHAPIRO

The botel industry's overall revenues dropped slightly in real terms from 1995, according to the Central Bureau of Statistics. The bureau recorded a revenue of NIS 3.84 hillion in current. terms, about 10 percent more than in 1995. However, when adjusted for the cost-of-living index, there was a decrease of less than 1%, the bureau announced yesterday. Also noteworthy was the fact that the revenue in shekels, from Israelis or tourists paying for services which were not VAT exempt, was greater than the revenue in foreign currency.

Foreign currency payments accounted for 46% of hotel revenue last year, compared with 51% in 1995.

The amount paid in shekels was NIS 2b., an increase of over 17% from 1995 in actual payments and . a rise of between 5% and 6% in real terms, after adjustment for the cost-of-living index.

The statistics took into account all payments to hotels, not only for rooms and meals, but for sports activities and banquet facilities.

It did not include payments for time-sharing. The hotels employed an average of 27,400 people a month last year, a slight drop from 1995, even though the number of room increased 4%.

The average wage for a hotel worker was NIS3,600, about 10% higher in actual terms than in 1995.

Commenting on the statistics, Hotel Association director Avi Rosental noted that the ratio of incoming tourists to Israeli guests is usually 60:40.

However, he added, in difficult years - such as during the intifada, the Gulf war or last year when tonrism dropped following a string of terrorist attacks - the number of incoming tourists drops and they are replaced by domestic tourists.

Ideally, Rosental said, there should be a ratio of 65:35, in . favor of incoming tourists.

Stoichkov in Bulgaria despite refusal to play

SOFIA (Reuter) - Volatile striker Hristo Stoichkov has been named in Bulgaria's squad for a World Cup qualifier against Cyprus on April 2 despite saying he would not play for the national team, soccer officials said yesterday.

Stoichkov quit the team last year demanding the resignation of the country's soccer chiefs.

Coach Hristo Bonev said he had oot spoken to Stoichkov but had sent him a telegram to his Barcelona team.

So far in the European qualifying group five, Bulgaria have lost to Israel and beaten Luxembourg and Cyprus.

Elway has surgery on throwing shoulder

DENVER (AP) - Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway underwent arthroscopic surgery on his throwing shoulder this week. Elway is expected to be ready when training camp opens July 18, although he will likely miss the team's mini-camp and throwing camp in May.

Elway, 36, has played 14 seasons in the National Football League. Monday's surgery was the second on his right shoulder, he underwent a similar procedure in January 1993 after his shoul-der bothered him during the 1992 season.

Davies ready and willing for Lions tour

LONDON (Reuter) - Veteran Welsh fly-half Johnathan Davies said yesterday he was available for the British Lions tour of South Africa and insisted he was still fit enough to perform at the highest level. The 34-year-old was not included in the preliminary squad announced by Lions manager Fran Cotton last month. But after a brilliant performance against England at the weekend, Cotton has indicated Davies could still make the final 35-man party to tour South Africa from May to July.

And Davies, who said last Saturday's match would be his last for Wales, insisted he was still good enough to play for the British side.

"I played in the international last Saturday and I've been playing in the European Cup and the first division with Cardiff and my fitness levels are still high," he said,

Mac. Haifa reach State Cup's last-8

By DEREK FATTAL

Maccabi Haifa became the seventh club to make it to the State Cup quarter finals after ending 2-0 victors against a plucky Hapoel Ashkelon last night at Kiryat Eliezer.

Ashkelon, the only Second Division team left in the competition after the eighth round played in January, forced the Haifaites into extra time.

In the second half of the extra half-hour, Maccabi's greater fitness and power quickly began to tell, and Hezi Sherazi opened in scoring for the hosts in the 106th minute. Haifa struck their second goal less than a minute later, when Sergei Belamchuk beat Ashkelon goalkeeper Assi Rahamim to ensure a Maccabi victory. The Haifaites could have had a third but Moshe Glam failed to pop in an easy chance near the end of the contest.

runaway Second Division leaders who look certain to play in the National League next season, proved with this performance that they have the quality of players necessary to hold their own in the top flight Forward Sagi Fini, and his colleague Boaz Meir were par-ticularly impressive. The ast fix thre of the round-of-16 between Happel Taiba and Happel Kfar Sava will be played on March 29.

In other news, Bnei Yehuda goalkeeper Liran Stranber who was badly injured in a 27th-minute colwith Happel Haita's Hishar Zuabi in Tuesday's cup tie, underwent surgery for a fractured checkbone and shattered eye socket at Haifa's Rambam Hospital late last night. No lasting damage is feared. The 22-year-old 'keeper is set to' be discharged next week but is unlikely to play again for the Hatikva Quarter outfit before the end of the current campaign.

Despite their ultimate failure, the Muench, secretary-general of the European Broadcasting Union, told a European Parliament hearing on public access to televized sports events

The hearing comes as the parliament and the European Commission prepare to find a way, through changes to the EU's TV without frontiers directive, to allow national governments to guarantee viewers free access to coverage of events like the Olympic Games and the World Cup soccer finals.

Pay TV operators who won exclusive rights to broadcast those events would have to ensure they were offered unscrambled or on a non-subscription channel.

Muench, whose EBU represents public broadcasters, agreed with for the privilege of watching major events, the audience would drop, the sport would decline in popularity, and this would eventually undermine it, Muench said. The Commission has proposed a system, generally supported by the EBU, which allows countries to draw up lists of events that are of "major importance for society" and must be shown free.

These lists must be recognized by broadcasters from other EU countries.

The Commission would decide whether to approve the list after consulting a panel of experts.

Jordan beats Sonics in OT in finals rematch

CHICAGO (Reuter) - It was a rematch of last year's NBA Finals and the oulcome was the same -Michael Jordan beat the Seattle SuperSonics again.

Jordan scored 32 points, pulled down a career-high 18 rebounds and sank the game-winning free throws with three seconds left in overtime to give the Bulls an $9-87 victory.

Jordan made 12-of-13 free throws, including six in overtime as he drew three fouls from 1996 Defensive Player of the Year Gary Payton.

"In reality, our defence really won the game for us," Jordan said. "We weren't able to score, but we were able to make sure they didn't score either" Payton was fouled by Jordan with 16 seconds left but made just one free throw that tied the game at 87-87. Jordan then drew a very questionable foul call on Payton and made both free throws for the victory.

"He (Jordan) lost the ball and I didn't foul anybody," said Payton, who had 14 points, 14 assists and 12 rebounds for his third career tripledouble. "We did a great job and played great defence. It's heartbreaking for us. I hope we get a chance to play them again."

Seattle's Hersey Hawkins, who scored 23 points, missed a threepointer at the buzzer. He had made consecutive treys to give the Sonics an 86-83 lead with 1:15 to play. Shawn Kemp added 16 points for Seattle, which led for nearly the entire game. Luc Longley had 16 points and Dennis Rodman grabbed 17 rebounds for the Bulls.

In New York, Patrick Ewing had 22 points and 10 rebounds and the Knicks held Vancouver scoreless for the final 9:05 in a 98-73 thumping of the Grizzlies.

Knesset panel slams decision to release Dotan

By LIAT COLLINS

The Knesset State Control Committee has demanded that the state and security establishment petition the High Court of Justice against the early release of Rami Dotan after serving only half his 13-year prison sentence on corruption charges involving Israel Air Force purchases.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai, answering several motions to the agenda in the Knessel plenum after the committee meeting, called the decision by a military parole board to release him Dotan on April 21 "a hitter and absolutely unacceptable mistake.

Dotan, a former chief IAF procurement officer was convicted of embezzling over $10 million from US military contracts.

Mordechai said the High Court perition is the only means of appealing the decision. He stressed that representatives of the defense establishment who appeared before the parole board had opposed Dotan's early release. He said the defense establishment's stand is that "we are talking about such serious charges against an officer of the rank of brigadier-general that there can be no forgiveness or pardon."

The IDF Judge Advocate-General Brig.-Gen.Uri Shoham told the committee the defense establishment is working on amendments to the military law which put so much power in the hands of the parole boards. Unlike in the civil sector, the process of appeal against the military parole boards is severely limited, he said, and the decision does not need the approval of the defense minister.

Shoham said the parole hoard's decision has raised the ire of many within the military who think it gave too much weight on Dotan's health and too little on national security. Under the proposed amendments, early release would be possible only after prisoners have served two-thirds of their sectence; there will be the possihility of the state appealing it within the military system; and the state and minister will be able to have a say. The changes, however, will not be retroactive and will not affect Dotan.

Yona Yahav (Labor) initiated the committee discussion and is leading a struggle within the Knesset against Dotan's release on health grounds. He described Dotan as "the biggest thief in military history" and said "his high blood prese probably comes from knowing he can't spend the money he's stolen while he's in prison."

The MKs raised several questions about the handling of the case, including why Dotan was charged in a military court and is serving his sentence in a military prison. Shoham said field security had objected to Dotan being in a regular prison in case it opened him np to hlackmail by other criminals.

Moshe Shahal (Labor), a former internal security minister, objected to this argument and said the Prisons Service manages to protect others convicted of serious crimes, such as traitor Mordechai and spy Marcus Vanunu Klingberg. Defense Ministry legal adviser Zvia Gross also objected to the early release of Dotan, saying the parole board ignored the seriousness of the charges and the damage caused to relations between the US and Israel. She said his release could give the impression that this is a lawless society and harm trust in the legal system here.

Knesset Law Committee chairman Shanl Yahalom (National Religious Party) is also demanding that Dotan not be released early.

Itim adds: A special military committee headed by the chief IDF medical officer determined in Its report to the military parole board that Rami Dotan's health does not present a problem to bis continued incarceration. It said: The committee believes that if Mr. Rami Dotan was jailed under standard conditions in a prison that has emergency medical facilities 24 hours a day, there would be no difference in the dangers facing him in jail and those in civilian life.

Lau allowed to accept pay for weddings

By HAIM SHAPIRO

Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Yisrael Lau's accepting payment from couples whom he marries is legal, the legal adviser of the Chief Rahbinate said yesterday. The adviser, attorney Menahem Yanovsky, issued a statement in response to a news item in Ha'arerz which said that Lau received payments ranging from $500 to $2,500, handed to him in an envelope on the evening of the wedding. According to

The paper said that Lau, whose salary is the same as that of the president of the Supreme Court, officiated at more than 100 weddings a year. According to Ha' aretz, Religious Affairs Ministry regulations forbid rabbis from charging for performing weddings, since a fee paid to the religious council includes the services of a rabbi. However Yanovsky rabhi, instead of one assigned by the religious council, it may choose any rabbi acceptable to the local marriage registrar and such a rabbi may receive a fee.

Yanovsky also said that both the sums Lau allegedly received and the number of marriages he performed were exaggerated. Yanovsky added that Lau has never demanded payment from any couple he married. He added that the payments are recorded by Lau's accountant.

MKs from the haredi factions are threatening to pull out of the coalition unless the government starts pushing through legislation that would recognize only Orthodox conversions.

United Torah Judaism, Shas, and National Religious Party MKs yesterday met and decided to demand the prime minister bring up the conversion bill for the cabinet's approval at its meeting tomorrow. They said the Knesset must hear the first reading of the bill before the Pessah recess at the beginning of April, because the time the High Court gave it to decide the issue is running out.

They said the proposed Conversion Law is part of the coalition agreement. MK Shmuel Halpert (UTJ) warned that if the prime minister does not stand by his commitment, this would bring down the coalition strength," said Halpert, who heads the religious caucus. "We number 23 MKs in religious parties and there are also religious MKs in other factions who will be prepared to join us in struggles on religious issues. Without us there is no coalition," he said.

Coalition chairman Michael Eitan promised he would forward the request to the premier.

The Council for Freedom of Science, Religion, and Culture in Israel, yesterday issued a statement calling on Netanyahu "to be the prime minister of the Jewish people and not the representative of a forceful religious bloc that is pushing toward splitting the nation by means of nullifying any conversion that is not Orthodox."

The MKs also discussed the controversy over the proposed closing of the Ramat Aviv shopping mall on Shabbar

A new law on detentions will come into force in May which rules, among other things, that a person cannot be held for more than 24 hours without being brought before a judge, instead of the 48 hours under the current law. The legislation also calls for special arrangementsto be in force during Shabbat and religious holidays. The Knesset Law Committee, chaired hy Shaul Yahalom (National Religious Party), discussed the new law yesterday. The committee determined that a person arrested more than 4 hours before the start of Shabbal or the haliday must be brought to court immediately. Someone arrested closer to the start of the holiday or Shabbat may wait until the following evening, but a senior police officer would have to sign the authorization for the delay.

A person arrested during Shabbat ot a holiday must appear before a judge no later than four hours after it ends or within 24 hours of arrest.

The committee will meet next week with the heads of the court system and police chiefs to discuss the implementation of the law.

Kahalani: Palestinian offices may still be closed Internal Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani told the Knesset plenum yesterday that the matter of four Palestinian insuitutes in Jerusalem suspected of being affiliated to the Palestinian Authority is being investigated, and if they are not found to be in order, they will be closed. He was answering a motion to the agenda by Micha Goldman (Labor), who asked the minister how wise it was to announce they would be closed knowing that it would be problematic to implement the decision.

Meanwhile, MK Michael Kleiner (Gesher) has filed a police compliant against Al-Quds University in Jerusalem, saying it is violating the law by offering degree courses without the permission of the Council for Higher Education.
